ANNOUNCEMENTS

Due to the upcoming BRET Annual Career Symposium and the BRET Alumni Reunion, the Office of Career Development team is not accepting individual advising appointments for the month of May. Instead, throughout May, we are offering the Advising Appointment Drop-In Hour on Wednesdays and Fridays from 11:30-12:30pm in Light Hall 340. Meet with Kim Petrie, Ashley Brady, or Kate Stuart in 20-minute appointments for any of your career-related questions.

Do you feel ready for the BRET Career Symposium? Capitalize on the many networking opportunities by attending sessions (one for postdocs, one for graduate students): Maximizing Your Networking at the BRET 25th Reunion and Career Symposium on Tuesday, May 23.

The BRET Annual Career Symposium is ideal for any graduate student and postdoctoral fellow, regardless of year in training. In fact, the best time to explore careers is in your first and second year of PhD training! Do not miss this amazing opportunity to meet alumni and explore career options from academic to off the beaten path.

The Christine Mirzayan Science and Technology Policy Graduate Fellowship Program is open and accepting applications starting today. This program provides Fellows with the opportunity to spend 12 weeks at the National Academies in Washington, DC learning about science and technology policy and the role that the scientific, engineering, and medical communities play in advising the nation.

On May 11, the Vanderbilt Science Policy Group will host a discussion on internship opportunities available for graduate students interested in science policy.

BRAINS -- Broader Representation of Academic Investigators in Neurosciences -- is a national program to accelerate and improve the career advancement of neuroscience postdoctoral researchers and assistant professors from underrepresented groups.

PathwaysToScience.org has 167 different postdoc and early career opportunities posted on the site, including postdoctoral fellowships, grants, travel awards, mentoring opportunities, and more.

The Atlanta BEST Magazine is run by trainees in their program and other BEST Institutions, and they are in search of contributing writers.

The CIRTL Network presents the online webinar: Developing a CV or Resume.
