Announcements

The BRET Office of Career Development is excited to welcome Ashley Brady! In April, Dr. Ashley Brady became the ASPIRE Program Manager and Director of Career Engagement and Strategic Partnerships. In this role, she will manage the design, development, and delivery of curricula and programs to provide professional skills training for biomedical sciences PhD students and postdoctoral fellows. As an alumna of the IGP and the Pharmacology program, Dr. Brady has come full circle in her new role. Read more about Dr. Brady in this post.

On May 27 from 11am-noon CST, Working in Industry, a
AAAS Career Webinar, will give insight on how to position yourself for a successful career in industry.

The Vanderbilt Center for Teaching announces three opportunities: Certificate in College Teaching, SoTL Scholars Program, and Blended and Online Learning Design.

Always a good read, the Science Careers and AAAS 2014 Career Handbook on advice and opportunities for scientists is now available online.

Learn more about the Phoebe S. Leboy Public Policy Fellowship.

The National Space Biomedical Research Institute (NSBRI) is currently soliciting proposals for the 2014 First Award Fellowship Program.

Become a contributing editor for Science in the Classroom, an initiative by Science Magazine to get K-12 and undergrads involved in reading their magazine and learning more about science in general.

Check out the upcoming offerings with VersatilePhD, including “How Academia Messes with Your Mind,” on May 21-22.

The University of Notre Dame is adding two Certificates in Patent Prosecution designed to prepare scientists and engineers to practice as patent agents.

Make your search and networking easier with these email templates from The Muse.

Want to be introduced to someone via LinkedIn? Here’s what NOT to do.

iBiology is a growing collection of free open-access online videos by scientists about research and discoveries as well as short talks on topics such as professional development, careers, policy, and education.

The Alsace Regional Award, Fulbright Scholar Program, is open to all levels of scholars, including early career, who are interested in doing research in a variety of fields including medical imaging, medical devices, physical and life sciences, and chemistry.

Three Princeton PhD candidates from Molecular Biology have started a podcast – PhD in Progress – to talk to graduate students about "topics of thriving in graduate school, pursuing an academic or non-academic career, and introducing the materials and resources capable of changing the way we believe graduate school should be."

If you have enjoyed attending this year’s PhD Career Connections, why not join the committee to help plan next year’s events?
