ANNOUNCEMENTS

Do you feel ready for the BRET Career Symposium? Capitalize on the many networking opportunities by attending sessions (one for postdocs, one for graduate students): Maximizing Your Networking at the BRET 25th Reunion and Career Symposium on Tuesday, May 23.

Do not miss this amazing opportunity to meet alumni and explore career options from academic to off the beaten path while at the BRET Annual Career Symposium. Alumni Career Trajectories: Blaze Your Own Path
Thursday, June 1, 2017
  REGISTRATION DEADLINE: May 25

Graduate students and postdocs are welcome to attend the BRET Reunion festivities, including the Morning of Discovery, which will feature the provost, deans, the BRET Office, and select graduate students who will give their 3MT presentation. Join us in the Student Life Center at 9am for additional networking during a morning together. (No registration required.)

Positions are open for the Scientist in the Classroom Partnership Program, which establishes partnerships between science teaching fellows (STFs) and Nashville elementary and middle school science teachers.
The AAAS Science and Technology Policy Fellowships provides scientists and engineers the opportunity to serve year-long fellowships and to learn firsthand about policy making. Applications are open for 2018.

The AAAS Center for Science Diplomacy is hosting a first-of-its-kind workshop in science diplomacy.

On September 18, the Science Alliance at the New York Academy of Sciences and PepsiCo will host a special Journey through Science Day in New York City. Deadline to apply is May 26.

The Rita Allen Fellowship for Science Communication is a new program that will provide a year's support for one fellow to study the field of science media, experiment with successful media formats, and work to expand science literacy in the general public.

NIAID offers a technology transfer fellowship program to provide opportunities to qualified candidates in the exciting and expanding career field of technology transfer.

The CDC offers multiple Public Health Fellowships, each with their own specific criteria, functions, and varying lengths.

The ASBMB Public Outreach Committee is proud to offer "The Art of Science Communication", an online course available for ALL scientists and STEM professionals. The next session starts June 5.
