Announcements

On Tuesday, June 17, the BRET Office of Career Development will host a Roundtable on Science Policy with fellow grad students and postdocs who have had interesting science policy-related experiences.

If you have enjoyed the past year's PhD Career Connections or the Annual Career Symposium, why not join either of the committees to plan future events? Email kate.stuart@vanderbilt.edu with your interest.

Volunteer for the Center for Science Outreach... there are several opportunities with different time commitments for varying interests.

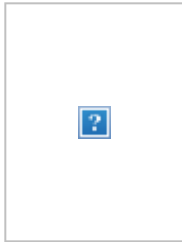

There is a new Vanderbilt login site for VersatilePhD. Also, this week is an asynchronous online panel, Careers in Data Science.

The Journal of Science Policy and Governance is a student-run, international project that provides graduate students the opportunity and training to serve as editors. They are currently looking for volunteer editors.

Save the date: the annual meeting of Tennessee's life science industry organization, Life Science Tennessee, will be October 20-22, 2014, in Nashville.

Upcoming Deadlines:

- Eppendorf & Science Prize for Neurobiology: June 15
- Proctor & Gamble FIRST conference: June 30
- Armenise-Harvard Foundation Career Development Award: July 15
- Alsace Regional Award, Fulbright Scholar Program: August 1
- AAAS Science & Technology Policy Fellowship: November 1

Light Hall 306 A&B
Registration is requested.

Spotlight

One of the speakers at the 2014 Annual Career Symposium, Dr. Jenny Morrell-Falvey, is a scientist at Oak Ridge National Laboratory (ORNL).

In her Symposium presentation and at the breakout sessions, Dr. Morrell-Falvey highlighted the many ways that her career is similar to scientific careers in academia. She manages research projects and research facilities. Through an affiliation with nearby University of Tennessee, Dr. Morrell-Falvey stays engaged in training and mentoring of doctoral students. Her job provides similar flexibility as academia.

One of the big differences that Jenny highlighted was that she often works in large, multi-disciplinary teams. She described herself as the "token biologist" on some projects, and she delights in the multiple disciplinary perspectives that are brought to bear on research problems. ORNL is one of several dozen federally funded R&D centers across the country. If you are intrigued by careers like Dr. Morrell-Falvey's, check out this list of federally funded R&D centers from the National Science Foundation. Maybe your future employer is on this list!
